Need some new ideas to refresh your driver education lessons? Want to learn more about social media and the impact it is having on teachers and students? If so, you should sign up for the first session of the Arrive Alive Professional Development Series.

Session #1 will feature Jessica Brantley, who will be sharing a lesson to get your students practicing health advocacy for healthy driving behaviors. Participants will receive this project based learning lesson that integrates technology to increase engagement and allow for peer feedback. This session will also include an overview from Jason Runk about how social media is being used to impact teachers and students.

Just when you think it couldn't get any better, we will also be receiving an update about the Choose Your Vibe - Arrive Alive! campaign.
